COMMUNITY ENERGY WORKSHOPS IN EXETER

By 2015 UK power stations will not be able to keep up with demand, leading to a risk of power cuts (Ofgem, 2012).

Geoscientists expect oil will decline in availability and increase in cost. Because of our dependence on oil in transport, agriculture and industry, experts predict global economic recession - increased transport costs will increase the price of everything which is not produced locally.

Are you concerned about energy costs?

Where will energy come from in the future?

Can we make a difference?

You are key to this initiative and we invite you to come along from 10.00 to 12.30 and get involved.

COMMUNITY ENERGY WORKSHOPS

Transition Exeter are running a series of community energy workshops, inviting members of Exeter neighbourhoods to get together and consider issues about energy. It will be a creative forum where as a community you can explore your beliefs, think together to generate a positive vision and plan for a more resilient future.

- Where will our energy come from in the future?
- How can our fuel bills be reduced?
- How can transport costs be lowered with rising fuel prices?
- Can we work together on community projects for renewable energy and energy efficiency?

Transition Exeter is a community group involved in promoting local solutions. Our aims are to

- Help create a healthier, happier, more empowered community
- Reduce our negative impacts on the environment.
- Survive better with climate change and peak oil.

We were involved in the development of the Real Food Store to ensure locally grown food is available in Exeter; and in the last year we have run Energy Efficiency projects, a Green Homes Tour and researched the viability of hydroelectric projects on the weirs in Exeter. We have no links to statutory bodies, which gives us freedom and flexibility.
